

BEAR M'TN BRIDGE BILL IS PASSED

Bridge to be Built by Corporation and Turned Over to State After Toll Have Been Collected for Thirty Years—Cavillier Calls It Grati.

By Telegram to The Freeman. Albany, March 18.—During the closing hours of the session, the legislature passed the Smith-Mastick bill, providing for the erection of a bridge across the Hudson river from Peekskill to Bear Mountain. The bridge is to be built by the Bear Mountain Hudson River Bridge Company, without cost to the state. Several Democrats spoke in opposition to the measure. Assemblyman Cavillier, New York city Democrat, declared that "it is nothing but a piece of graft."

Pointing his finger at Assemblyman Mastick, Republican, of Westchester, Assemblyman Cavillier declared: "I think that you are one of the slickest members of this house that Bill Ward has ever sent up here."

Under the provisions of the bill, the tolls to be charged on the bridge are not to exceed the tolls now charged by ferries at that point, and are to be under the jurisdiction of the public service commission. At the end of thirty years the bridge will be turned over to the state.

When Assemblyman Mastick was questioned by the Democratic members as to why provision was not made in the bill for erection of the bridge by the state, he replied: "Because Governor Miller said that the state could not afford to build the bridge at the present time."

DELIVERY TRUCK UPSET BY AUTO

Daniel Halloran and Son, Peter J. Halloran, Had Narrow Escape When Percy Lane's Auto Rammed Truck on Broadway Friday Evening—Both Cars Wrecked.

Daniel Halloran and his son, Peter J. Halloran, of the plumbing firm of Halloran & Son, had a narrow escape from death or serious injury early Friday evening when the Ford truck they were riding in was rammed by the Buick touring car driven and owned by Percy Lane of Ulster Park at Broadway and Chester street. The truck was knocked completely over and the two Hallorans hurled out onto the White pavement. The Buick, after hitting the truck, ran down Broadway for about one hundred and fifty feet and crashed into an electric light pole.

At the time Mr. Lane was on his way down Broadway in his auto and the Hallorans were driving out of East Chester street to cross Broadway into West Chester street. The Ford truck had gotten about in the center of the roadway when the Buick struck the right rear fender, upsetting the truck.

Peter J. Halloran, who was driving the truck, his father sitting beside him, informed Officer Entrott, who was on the scene shortly afterward, that when he first saw Lane's car it was coming toward him zig-zagging from side to side, and before he could avoid it the Lane car had crashed into the Ford.

Peter Halloran escaped with bruises, and his father, aside from the shock, appeared to escape unhurt. The Ford truck was completely wrecked and was later taken to the Bets garage on Delaware avenue for repairs.

Percy Lane was cut about the head from flying glass from his windshield, and was taken to the office of Dr. John P. Larkin, nearby, where his wounds were dressed, and he was later taken home. His car was removed to the Martin garage on Broadway for repairs. It also was badly wrecked.

The electric light pole which brought the Buick to a sudden stop was jarred loose and the entire top of the pole which contained the supports for the arc light was jarred loose.

That no one was more seriously injured in the collision seemed marvelous to those who were on the scene shortly after it happened.

By Telegram to The Freeman. London, March 18.—The Prince of Wales' visit to India has not had any conciliatory effect upon political unrest in that country, said an Indian dispatch to the Star today. The prince is now enroute from India for Japan. Commenting upon the effects of the British royal heir's mission to India, the Star's dispatch says the total results were as follows:

Bombay.—Serious rioting in which there were 400 casualties including many killed. The property damage was heavy.

Calcutta.—Seven hundred and fifty arrests. A civilian guard formed to assist the soldiers in patrolling the streets. Armored cars are being used by the patrols.

The Star says that the total result of the prince's visit has been to "disseminate the grave conditions that exist in India. Indian opinion, it was declared, intimates that the demonstrations in favor of the prince were arranged in advance."

The request is for assistance in suppressing the expected India uprising, the Kokuminto or People's Party, which includes the leading anti-militarists of Japan. It is bitterly opposed to extending to Britain the military assistance asked."

KAATERSKILL TO BE EVEN GREATER

Improvement to Hotel Acquired by Tannenbaums Will Make It One of Biggest Places in Country.

The work of remodeling, repairing, furnishing and repainting the famous Hotel Kaaterskill, near Haines Falls, is now under way, some of the contracts having been awarded by Harry Tannenbaum, Inc., the new owners.

Brown & Dressel of Clinton avenue have been awarded the contract for the plumbing work, which is quite extensive, and have had a force of plumbers busy at the hotel most of the past week. The contract for electrical wiring and other electrical work was awarded on Friday in New York city to the H. F. Electric Company of New York. The carpenter work will be done by Adelbert Griffin of this city.

The sale of the Hotel Kaaterskill some time ago to Harry Tannenbaum is regarded as one of the biggest sales of summer resort hotel property which has taken place in several seasons, and the plans of the new owners to contemplate extensive improvements and alterations in accordance with plans and specifications of Architect Myron S. Teller of this city, who will have charge of the work.

Seventy-five bath rooms will be added at once to the hotel, and running water will be conducted to every guest room. A new water supply system will be installed and the entire hotel and annex will be newly and modernly equipped. Electric lights will be placed throughout both buildings, telephones will be installed in each room and the entire hotel will be repainted. The contract for painting has not yet been awarded. All work will be completed by May 15 in anticipation of the big opening which will occur on Memorial Day, Tuesday, May 30.

Wesley Gregory of this city has been looking after many of the preliminary arrangements for the work for Mr. Tannenbaum. On account of the location of the hotel, it will be necessary for all workmen employed in carrying out the various contracts to live in the hotel while the work is in progress, and a contract also has been awarded for supplying the men with meals, the hotel management supplying all dishes, cooking utensils, bedding, fuel and water.

The huge ball room of the hotel, which for many years was one of the show places among the summer resort hotels of the state, will undergo extensive improvements along with the rest of the house, and equipment will be added which will enable guests to witness the latest motion picture productions. Other amusement features will be installed, a new rathskeller will be added and nothing will be left undone to make the hotel one of the most attractive among the summer resorts of America. Among the features which will receive attention as soon as weather conditions permit is the golf course, which will be enlarged and improved.

The Hotel Kaaterskill is ideally located for a summer resort and the extensive view which it commands always has added charm to the other attractions which have prevailed. The hotel and annex together provide about five hundred guest rooms. The main building has a frontage of three hundred feet and the annex, which is connected with it by a one-hundred foot enclosed corridor, has a frontage of two hundred feet. At the rear of the main building is an extension forty feet wide and two hundred and forty feet long, which on main floor is occupied by the dining room, one of the largest hotel dining halls to be found anywhere. Another extension from the north end of the main building is connected with the extension containing the dining hall, so as to form a court, which also will receive its share of attention in the general scheme of improvement. The hotel, both main building and annex, is four stories in height.

Harry Tannenbaum, who purchased the hotel, is one of the most widely known men in America, for many years having conducted, with Mrs. Tannenbaum, the famous Oak Court Hotel in New York city.

COPS MAY BECOME NAIROBI DEAD NOW TWENTY-THREE

A Pool Table Has Been Presented to the Police Department by a Friend and Will be Installed in the Lounging Room—Who is Champion Pool Player?

"Who is the champion pool sharp of the police force?" That is a question that will shortly be settled as soon as Policeman Guernsey Burger, the handy man and carpenter of the department, gets the new pool table set up in the lounging room at police headquarters in the city hall.

A friend of the department has presented the force with a pool table which now awaits assembling under the skillful hands of Officer Burger, who knows all about pool tables and how they are put together. The table, which was delivered Thursday evening at the city hall, is being admired by all of the members of the department who have seen it.

To tell the truth, however, the police force does not have any too much time to spare from their duties, but when things are quiet at the city hall and about the city the men on day and night duty at the hall sometimes find that time hangs heavy on their hands.

To while away what time they had, checkers were introduced and there is a grave question as to which of the cops is the champion player. Officers Bob Healey, Jim Martin, Gus Kuehn, Art Dempsey, Simon, Bert Soper, Bill Reardon, Frank Fatum and Guernsey Burger are all skilled players, and some of the games they stage are in the professional class.

Whether pool will succeed checkers and which officer will prove the best pool shot is still a mooted question. Any officer seen next week with a white mark on the face should not be accused of adopting the modern female custom of powdering his face, for it will probably be some chalk from the tip of his cue.

Starting next Monday, all will be set for the tryouts for the pool championship of the department. Details as they develop will be announced promptly.

Soon after the first of April the vacation period will start this year and as many police as possible will be given two weeks' vacation before summer sets in.

The policemen who are unable to take their vacation this spring will wait over until the fall and winter. It has been customary in the past for all of the vacations to occur during the warm months. By changing the schedule the police department will have its full force of men on duty during the summer when their services are most needed to care for traffic problems that will arise this year.

The board also decided that it would not furnish policemen to baseball games or other amusements this summer, but would appoint at the request of any organization any number of special police whose service must be paid for by the organization seeking them. The police department, however, will furnish traffic officers to care for street traffic.

The Rev. Dr. F. B. Seelye, recently appointed a member of the board, attended his first meeting that evening. Several routine matters were also taken up and the board then adjourned.

NEW YEAR'S FOOD

"Neigh, neigh," said one city horse to another city horse. "I have had a New Year's meal."

"So have I," said another horse.

"Wasn't it good," asked the first horse.

"I've never known hay and oats to taste as they did at that meal," answered the second horse.

"Neither have I," said the first horse.

"I wonder how it all happened," said the second horse. "I mean that I wonder how we happened to get these fine meals. Have you any idea?"

"Yes," said the first horse, "I heard all about it."

"You'll tell me, I hope," asked the second horse.

"If I have time," the first horse said, "I am standing outside of this big apartment house as you see. I naturally wouldn't stand inside it."

"But inside is my master delivering bundles and packages and parcels. The parcels are filled with groceries, I believe. And I will talk until he comes out and I go on to another place."

"Well," said the second horse, "I can only listen until my master comes out from delivering meat parcels."

"Please talk until one of us has to leave."

"Very well," said the first horse. "Neigh, neigh, very well."

"You see," the first horse continued, "we were given this fine New Year's meal by a horse's hospital."

"There is this hospital for horses who are sick and worn out and who are looked after."

"Now there are many horses who may feel very tired out and who may work hard, too, and who may not get enough food."

"They are not sick, and so they don't need to go to a hospital. But they are often very tired, as I've said, and as I've also said they may not get enough food."

"Well, on New Year's Day some ladies who have a great deal to do for the hospital for horses suggested that they should give a banquet for every horse that didn't look well fed or who looked as if he didn't get enough to eat."

"They were all about the city ready to offer the horses these meals, and they hoped too to make the owners of the horses ashamed of themselves for getting the horses to work so hard without giving them enough to eat."

"They also are going to give horse-shoe chains and blankets now that the cold, snowy, icy weather is here."

"But how good that hay and those oats did taste! No child ever then enjoyed an ice cream cone more than I enjoyed my share of the banquet."

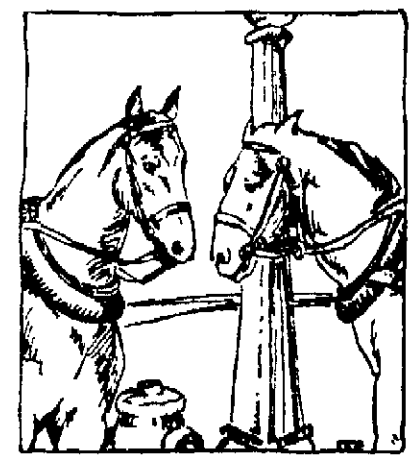

"Wasn't it a nice idea to give a horse's party?" said the second horse.

"It was a gorgeous idea," the first horse said, "and I believe my master was ashamed when he told my owner that I was considered a horse who didn't get enough to eat."

"I believe my owner too, is much ashamed and will do differently in the future."

"So you see it is a fine way of starting off the New Year."

"Not only do we get a beautiful New Year's Day banquet food, but there is a very strong chance of our having a great deal more of such food all the year. That is—our owners will see that we have much better food and more of it from now on."

"Neigh, neigh," said the second horse, "I am glad that there is a New Year once in awhile. It seems a fine idea to think of starting off a New Year with such fine ideas as well as such fine hay."

"And now that I wish you a Happy New Year, I'm pretty sure you will have a much happier one than ever before with a great deal more hay and oats."

"I wish the same to you," said the first horse, "and I too, feel that that wish will come true. And let us wish that those who think so thoughtfully and kindly of horses will have happiness all the year and for many, many other years, too."

"That's a good wish," said the second horse. "A mighty good wish. I wish that one also!"

"Neigh, neigh, n-e-l-g-h, I wish that wish also!"

REASONABLE GOOD THINGS

A beef loaf is enjoyed occasionally and is an economical meat. The following is one which is particularly good:

Beef Loaf.—Take one pound of finely chopped round steak, one-half pound of lean and fat fresh pork also chopped, one medium sized onion, one small red pepper, both finely chopped, one cupful of cooked oatmeal, or the dry may be used, adding one cupful of strained tomato and two well-beaten eggs, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt and one-half teaspoonful of pepper. Mix in a loaf and bake one hour, basting well after it begins to brown. Serve hot, or cold in slices with tomato catsup in lemon cups and parsley for garnish.

Browned Sweet Potatoes With Peanut Butter.—Select medium-sized sweet potatoes, wash preferred, and steam them in their jackets. Remove the skins and cut the potatoes lengthwise in one-third inch slices, spread with peanut butter, dust with a trace of nutmeg and brown in a hot oven.

Macaroni With Peanut Butter.—Take three cupfuls of cooked macaroni or spaghetti, putting a layer of it in the bottom of a baking dish; cover with a sauce, using two tablespoonfuls of peanut butter and one of butter to two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt and pepper to taste and one and one-half cupfuls of milk, cooked until smooth. Arrange in layers with the macaroni and finish the top with buttered crumbs. Bake long enough to brown the crumbs and heat the mixture piping hot. Serve from the baking dish.

Junket Dessert.—Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff; add the yolks gradually to the whites, after beating until thick. Beat one pint of milk until just lukewarm, add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, flavor with vanilla and pour over the eggs; stir in one-half of a junket tablet dissolved in a tablespoonful of water. Turn into sherbet glasses and let stand in a warm place until firm. Then chill and serve garnished with sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

METTACHONTS

Mettachonts, March 16.—Church services on Sunday morning at the school house were well attended. The Rev. L. M. Braam delivered an interesting sermon, enjoyed by all as are all of Mr. Braam's sermons. Services were also held in the evening.

Jesse Osterhout, who has been confined to his house with a heavy cold and grip, is improving.

Those taking part in the entertainment to be given in the near future met at the school house on Monday evening to rehearse their various parts. Proceeds of same will be for the benefit of the new hall which is nearing completion. The entertainment will be given exclusively by the men and boys of the place and will consist of minstrel and dialect. The men will serve supper afterwards while the ladies take a much needed rest from serving meals.

The residents of this place are solidly in favor of rebuilding our Dutch Reformed Church on the old site in the near future. With the present desirable location with sheds and parsonage so near all agree it would be the height of folly to change and make it still further away for members from this place. Our church is in a prosperous condition with a good attendance each Sunday.

Mrs. Rosawell Osterhout and Herman and Leslie Osterhout motored to Ellenville one day last week.

MIXED JURIES.

Those professional feminists who are demanding another constitutional amendment on the ground that women are still far from the enjoyment of their full "equal rights" ought to feel encouraged by what happened at Trenton, N. J., the other night. An Italian was on trial charged with assaulting his 14-year-old sister-in-law and when a jury was selected for this unsavory case there was no discrimination in favor of the male sex. Six women were chosen as well as six men, and after four hours of balloting without reaching a verdict the six men and six women were locked in together overnight. It seems that the night was largely spent in reading papers, smoking cigarettes and playing cards, with occasional discussion of the rape of the 14-year-old girl and more fruitless balloting.

All this must have furnished excitement aplenty, yet the women at last grew sleepy and "lay down on the tables." But "no sooner had they dozed off than one of the male jurors would shake them into wakefulness with the declaration that another ballot was going to be taken." Such were the scenes, as reported, until release came at ten o'clock next morning. It is likely that some of the women did not fully enjoy the experience, but they at least had the satisfying consciousness that they were "equal." This is by no means the only case of the kind. In St. Paul, Minn., recently seven women were locked up two nights with men jurors. Women are getting their "rights" on mixed juries and unsavory cases to an extent that ought to satisfy even the most radical of professional feminists.

"EQUAL RIGHTS" FOR MEN.

The nineteenth amendment has not stopped the clamor for "equal rights" for women. Professional feminists have kept on beating their drums as vigorously as before and the continuous din seems to have got on the nerves of Senator Fox of Maryland. At all events he has ventured to introduce a bill in the legislature of his state to assure men their "rights," demanding not only alimony for divorced men but that Maryland women "convicted of assault" shall be whipped just as men are. Conservative, old-fashioned folk may well be excused for wondering what the world is coming to and "whither are we drifting," as they scan the propositions of this remarkable measure, which, in part, reads:

That males and females are born free and equal, and that neither shall be granted any privileges that are not enjoyed by the other. That it shall be the duty of a wife to contribute at least one-half to the expenses of the home and the support of the family. That in divorce actions, where it is shown that the husband is dependent on the wife for support, the wife shall be required to furnish money by way of alimony for the maintenance of the husband and children during pendency of the suit. That in cases of desertion by wife or husband, either party found guilty may be sentenced to imprisonment. That any wife who appropriates to her own use private funds of her husband may be tried and convicted of embezzlement. The same to apply to husbands. That the laws concerning assault may be enforced equally against husband and wife, and any wife or husband convicted may be whipped by not more than 10 lashes or be imprisoned, in the discretion of the Court.

YOUTH'S DEVOTION.

Instances of devotion at all costs to the ideals of the war on the part of high-minded as well as courageous young soldiers have not failed to come to light, but usually such devotion has blossomed only in the hearts of these young men or remained unknown to the public in the sacred privacy of family records. Enough has been published, however, to convince the doubtful in the generation now passing that the future may be safely trusted to the young. The recent publication of the "last letters" of a gallant young French soldier written before his death has brought to light a remarkable letter to his father from a young English officer who foresaw his death in battle and wrote, in part, as follows:

This is a final message for you to read when I am dead. I want first to thank you as your son. You have been to me the best father a fellow could wish. I want to thank you for the gift of a cross and strong and vigorous and healthy body, straight limbs, and flows that could serve England well. I am glad for the gift of a powerful intellect and a discerning mind—thank you. For the long years of self-denial that made my education possible; for the guidance and teaching that kept me straight in the days of youth; for the counsel and help ever freely proffered; for all noble things in your example. It is in a good cause that I lay down my life. I am proud and glad to be one of those whom England takes, one of those who in their bodies pay the price of her honor. And though in your heart there will be sorrow, you will also be proud, and you will not grieve over-much. All good things be unto you—service honor, wisdom—and in the end peace. Your son, a soldier of England salutes you! Farewell!

Burroughs Nature Club Notes

March 18, 1922.
By ROBERT H. HOFFMAN, CO.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Dept. of this paper. Look for answers in this column.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. We have several bob-tail cats in the neighborhood. Are they wholly cat or is there a mixture of rabbit, as some believe?

2. What soil is best for a Christmas cactus, and does it require much water?

3. Are swimming birds ever bothered with lice?

Answers to Monday's Nature Notes.

1. How can I feed a pet chameleon? It won't eat anything but flies, and I can't get them in cold weather.

The captive chameleon should be supplied with meal worms, such as are sold in bird-supply houses; also with cockroaches, when flies cannot be caught. It also needs drinking water. This should be given either in a very shallow dish, or better yet, sprinkled on lettuce leaf, or something of the kind, to imitate the dew drops with which in nature the chameleon quenches thirst.

2. How do moths get out of their cocoons?

In some species the insect in the pupa stage has a sort of spine growing from the forehead, with which to tear or cut open a hole in the cocoon. In others, the cocoon secretes a fluid which softens or dissolves a spot in the cocoon, and the weakened wall is easy to burst through. The Emperor moth, Saturnia carpinia, makes a special cocoon with the end left open but protected by hairs laid together in a cone-shaped tip. This will not open from the outside, but parts from pressure from the inside of the cocoon.

3. Does a hen hold her tail in a drooping position in the rain because she does not like wet weather?

We doubt if a drooping tail means deflection of spirits in hens as it does in dogs. The hen wants to hold her body in such a way as to avoid giving rain drops any lodging place where they could soak in through the light shingling of surface feathers, and wet the layer. By lowering her tail she lets the rain run off.

Identified.

The bank teller in a snappy way said, "But I don't know you, madam."

The woman was red-headed, and she got "red-headed" in a minute. She said, "Oh, yes, you do. I don't need anyone to identify me. I'm the 'red-headed' hen' next door to you whose 'imps of boys' are always running across your garden. When you started to town this morning your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want a dinner fit to eat this evening you'll have to leave me a little money. I can't keep this house on Christian Science.'"

"Here is your money," interrupted the paying teller faintly.

KINGSTON CHAPTER HAD GALA NIGHT

Friday evening was a gala evening for Kingston Chapter, No. 155,
O. E. S., when Right Worthy Alice
E. Norwood, district deputy grand matron, and Right Worthy Harry A.
Tremper, assistant grand lecturer of the Greene-Ulster District, paid their official visit to the chapter, and were received with the honors due their office. Mrs. Norwood is a past matron of Clinton Chapter, and Mr.
Tremper a past patron of Kingston
Chapter.

Long before the opening of the chapter the lodge rooms in the Masonic Building, Broadway and Strand, were filled with one of the largest gatherings of Eastern Stars and Master Masons in some time. Visitors were present from Catskill, Saugerties, and other places in the Greene-Ulster District.

The Star Degrees were conferred in full form by the officers of Kingston Chapter, and during the evening Harry Clearwater rendered a number of fine baritone solos and was forced to respond with encores.
At the close of the conferring of the Star Degrees, the visiting grand officers were presented with tokens of the high esteem in which they are held by the members of Kingston Chapter.

Both Mrs. Norwood and Mr. Trem-per spoke briefly on the work of the Eastern Star, and their addresses were listened to with close attention and applauded.

At the close of the chapter a banquet was served the visitors and members which was followed by a social hour when old acquaintances were renewed. The favors at each place at the banquet tables were little shamrocks in honor of it being St. Patrick's Day.

Under the direction of Worthy Matron Florence Clarke Lovell the chapter rooms had been most artistically decorated for the occasion.
In addition to the national colors which formed an important part of the decorations the color scheme was green and white.

It was an early hour this morning before the chapter finally closed after one of the most brilliant and successful communications held in some time.

Part of Time's Heritage.
Somewhere Shelley's line in "Adonais":
"about one whose name was writ in water comes to mind while reading the announcement that a fossil brown-stone slab bearing the imprint of raindrops has been presented to the zoological museum of Trinity college. This was a rainstorm that occurred thousands and thousands of years ago, and yet the marks of it are still to be seen.
Like the lucid, ever-vital personality of John Keats, these raindrops have become part of the heritage of Time.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

THE Paige 6-44 is a smaller brother of the famous 6-66. There is a difference in power, wheel base, seating capacity and price. But both cars have one thing in common—the spirit and beauty of a Kentucky thoroughbred.

To merely look at the 6-44 is a pleasant experience. But to drive it, to tap that mighty reservoir of fifty horse power, to sink back in the cushions and feel the gentle sway of perfect spring suspension—these are things that mean the real thrill of living.

Surely you are entitled to a good motor car when it means so much in health and happiness. The 6-44 has always been good, but this year it is much better than ever. And at the greatly reduced price of $1465, where can you find a sounder, safer investment?

AN EVENING OF BEAUTIFUL MUSIC

Chief Caulpican and Accompanying Artists Disclose Great and Varied Talent—Indian Songs Especially Interesting.

The big audience gathered at the High School Auditorium Friday evening to hear Chief Caulpican and Signorina Catarina Guerriere sing had an evening of rarely beautiful music; one of those evenings of music when an audience sits breathless lest it lose one tone, one word.

Before they were half through "Oh, Woe Thou in the Cauld Blast" by Mendelssohn, Miss Guerriere and Chief Caulpican were entirely in rapport with their audience, the clear flute-like tones of the lyric soprano contrasting beautifully with the vibrant cello tones of the lovely baritone voice in this melodious song of Mendelssohn's.

No matter what he sings, one feels like paraphrasing the oft quoted stanza, "Sweetest the strains, when in the songs the singer has been lost," to "Sweetest the strains when in the songs the singer finds himself and thou," when Chief Caulpican is the soloist. One is as much convinced that he is master of his art, as that he is "master of his fate," when he sings the "Invictus," and rejoices in both the art and the master.

"Caro mio ben" by Giordani; "Absence" by Berlioz; "Dost thou Remember" by Augusta Holmes as sung by the chief, were each of them so appealing that an encore number was inevitable and the audience was more than delighted to hear him sing "The Tercerido Song."

Madame Sembrich, with whom Miss Guerriere is studying, would have been pleased indeed with her pupil Friday evening, especially in her singing of "Caro mio ben" from Verdi's "Rigoletto," and "Una voce poco fa" from "Barber of Seville" by Rossini. Her clear soprano voice has a wide range, is flexible and remarkably true, even the very high notes being really enjoyable and she possesses considerable dramatic genius, so needed in these two more elaborate numbers. She was at all times generous with her encore numbers.

The Prologue from "Pagliacci" as sung by Chief Caulpican in costume was simply splendid and gave the audience an idea of what it would be to hear him on the Metropolitan Opera House stage.

Miss Guerriere sang just one group of short songs that were all very pleasing. They were "When I Was Seventeen" by Sjogren; "Hedge Roses" by Schubert, sung with particular finesse; and that poignant little song, "The Little Tree," by Tartan.

Naturally, interest centered especially around suite of "Indian Songs" sung by the Chief in Indian costume. The first one, "Pale Moon," by Fred Knight Logan captivated the audience, and before they had fully recovered from its beauty Chief Caulpican was singing "My Bark Canoe" (Ojibway) by Frederick Burton. The Chief told this bit of story about the song, making it like the following numbers, also explained, the more interesting. As originally found by Mr. Burton it had little to it but the refrain "All night long." He found that that meant the waiting for his sweet heart all night long, and finally, that this waiting was in the bark canoe. Then came the song as sung, with the mystery of night, the flowing water, the love that can wait. Entirely different was the "Sunrise Call" (Zuni) by Carlos Trover, for this was the stirring call of the chieftain to the warriors to sunrise worship, with the echo answering that call. The Chief said it was sometimes called "Echo Song." Intensely dramatic was the "Sioux Death Chant," a composition of the Chief's giving an almost spoken recitative against an imposing minor music in the accompaniment. It was the farewell to a noble young chieftain, by his father; by his sweetheart; by his mother; by his tribesmen; and the final funeral march to the burial. The Chief sang to the continued audience response to the continued audience he sang after a verse from "Des Hauteurs" by special request.

"Invictus," when Chief Caulpican sings "Invictus," one absolutely forgets weariness, discouragement, discontent and is renewed in strength and courage and faith even as he is "Master of my fate and Captain of my soul."

AN EVENING OF BEAUTIFUL MUSIC
When the Chief sang "Largo al factotum" from the "Barber of Seville," while one was enjoying it to the brim, for the Chief has a keen and subtle sense of humor, one had to admit and not at all grudgingly, that he certainly can do musical stunts that amaze one, and consequently this number held the audience smiling with the humor, gasping at the technique and thrilled with the wonderful, rich, true, beautiful voice. The encore number after this was again by request, "Years at the Spring."

The program closed with that lovely duet from Don Giovanni, "La ci darem la mano," sung so capitally by Miss Guerriere and the Chief that though it was the last number on the program they were recalled and to the delight of the audience repeated the song. All through the evening the audience had been greatly enjoying the admirably sympathetic and musically accompanying of Miss Gunhilde Jette.

The thanks of the community are due to the Athletic Association of the high school for this long to be remembered evening of lovely music.

HIS AWFUL HEIR

By EDNA BARNES

Copyright, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Sylvester Pelam, in the parlance of his fellow-townsmen, was a rich old crab. He surely was rich, even as fortunes are reckoned nowadays; he was old, if one considers three score and 13 as such. As to being a crab—well, it might be said that he waited backward, at least as far as his ideas were concerned.

But everyone has one inconsistency, and old Sylvester's pet hobby was this. He was interested in chiropography to the point of its being an obsession. He was forever having to explain to his acquaintances that chiropography was not the care of the feet, but a science by which one can read character in handwriting. Let him get hold of a neighbor's writing, and he advertised the poor unfortunate's faults all over the town. Never did he have anything commendable to report.

So far did old Syl's hobby possess him that rumor had it that he had willed that his entire estate be used to establish an institute to promulgate the truths of the science (as interpreted by Sylvester Pelam) to the end of dispersing a universal knowledge of chiropography.

Now, there was none to dispute this will. His only son was dead—really dead—although to old Syl he had been dead from the moment he announced his intention of marrying Edith Melville. She was an actress. Old Syl wouldn't even see her. Thus, for 23 years, old Syl had heard of his son only twice—once recently when he died and on another occasion when his wife died at the birth of their little son, Melville.

Old Syl might have softened toward the child, had he not been branded with his mother's name. He had almost forgotten the existence of "the brat," when out of a clear sky came a letter from the youngster, now aged twenty-one. It was an ordinary enough letter, typewritten on the letterhead of a well-known brokerage concern in New York. Melville was applying for a life insurance policy and he wanted to know what his maternal grandmother died of.

Old Syl might not have read the missive but for the signature. Never had he run across such a specimen. It was clear-cut and bold, with just enough slant to denote ambition, but with no trace of unpleasant aggressiveness. So he was interested in life insurance—more prudent than his father, old Syl reflected.

Old Syl went to the phone. Finally came the report that Melville was not yet in. Old Syl retired to brood over the wonderful signature, assured by the operator that he would be summoned as soon as his "party" could be located.

It was nearly 9:30. The "party" was in a tawdry New York boarding house, leisurely attiring himself for the day. He emerged looking like an advertisement for a haberdashery, whistling nonchalantly and feeling quite positive that his lateness this morning would be the last straw. The manager would surely stand for no more. He was a rotten bookkeeper, anyway—he was clever enough to know that. However, he didn't care. Something would turn up. Something always did.

The reason for today's lateness was the usual one—up until all hours the night before dancing with Kathleen, the pearl of all womanhood.

Kathleen talked to Pel-Mel frankly. Let him get a decent income and she would consider matrimony.

Pel-Mel Pelam's conjecture was right; his doom was already sealed when he reached office. The manager was prepared to deal the blow. "Yes, sir," was all Pel-Mel had to say when told his services would be dispensed with. He hardly had a chance to realize he now belonged to the vast army of unemployed when Boston called again.

Pel-Mel emerged from the booth ten minutes later, warm and dazed. The gist of it all was that his grandfather, a mysterious old grandfather of whom his parents had told him almost nothing—was arranging for $100,000 to be placed to his credit in a New York bank that very day. "Don't want you to have to wait till I'm dead to be glad you have a grandfather," old Syl had explained.

A more curious person than Pel-Mel Yellam might have wondered at this sudden interest, but Pel-Mel's mind was occupied only with the jungle of money. Why, $100,000 would buy Kathleen's consent, with some change left over.

Pel-Mel grabbed his hat and started to Kathleen. "Pel-Mel" was the right name for him, thought many a clerk, as he dashed through the office. The accommodating stenographer with the big, serious eyes, sat near the door. "O, Mr. Pelam," she called to him, and then she gave him a proxy message. Awfully decent of her, of course, thought Pel-Mel, but why stop him, even for a moment? Couldn't she see he was in a hurry? All she had said to him was: "You were gone last night when I finished that letter to your grandfather, so I just signed it myself. I hope you don't mind?"

In All Humility.
"You sometimes discuss subjects you don't understand," remarked the censorious friend.
"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "but in all humility, I'm perfectly willing to keep the conversation going so that the other fellow will have a chance to explain 'em to me.'"

DIGNITY should be the keynote of the decorations for your rooms—get it at BLOCK'S, 36 Broadway

Mlle. Margarete Matzenauer, famed opera diva, will file divorce proceedings against Floyd Grotzbach, her chauffeur husband, who, when she married him, she claimed to be "the 100 per cent man." "I picked him out of the gutter and that's where I leave him," she declares. "You can tell the world I'm through—all through with him." A woman of forty will be named as co-respondent, the singer said. Grotzbach has returned to San Francisco, where he and his wife formerly resided.

On Hoping for Great Age.

In spite of the fact that most people say that life is not worth living, they are always anxious to know how centenarians do it. As it is, no two recipes for long life agree. Some of these giddy old things chew tobacco and drink a bottle of whisky after every meal, while others live on starch and boiling water. Apparently it doesn't matter a bit what you do, so long as you persevere. The only thing is that you have to try a thing for a hundred years or so to see whether it suits your constitution. The latest method of reaching antiquity is that of Mrs. Ann Grump, who died recently at the age of one hundred and four. She was married, but she left her husband on her wedding day, and never saw him again. So now you know—but somehow I don't think this method will become popular among many girls. —London Opticon.

Greenwich Village.

The first name for Greenwich Village, New York city, was "Sappokanican." At least, the first mention of the location occurs in Dutch records, in which reference is made to the Indian village of that name, where Hudson is supposed to have stopped for supplies. The site of this tiny village is identified as lying east of the Gansevoort market, just below Fourteenth street, between Ninth avenue and North river. Peter Stuyvesant's predecessor, Wouter Van Twiller, the second Dutch governor, conceived the pleasant idea of appropriating to himself, among other perquisites of his governorship, the company farm called "Number Three," and covering the whole of the future Ninth ward, to be his own private tobacco plantation, it is recorded. In colonial times the English called the place Greenwich, and because of its healthfulness and fertility it became a popular place of residence for well-to-do New Yorkers of that period.

A Wider Culture.

When one sees millions of people thinking the same thoughts and reading the same books and perceiving that, as the multitude grows, its influence becomes always stronger, it is hard to imagine how new points of repulsion and contrast are to arise, new diversities of sentiment and doctrine to be developed. Nevertheless, there is reason to believe that, as the intellectual proficiency and speculative play of mind which are now confined to a comparatively small class become more generally diffused, as the pressure of effort towards material success is relaxed, as the number of men devoted to science, art and learning increases, so will the dominance of what may be called the business mind decline, and with a richer variety of knowledge, tastes and pursuits, there will come also a larger crop of marked individualities, and of divergent intellectual types. —James Bryce.

Washington's Farsightedness.

Washington was the first American conservationist. A biographer has said of him that he realized that man owes a duty to the future just as he owes a debt to the past. He deplored the already developing policy of robber exploitation by which the soil and forests have been despoiled, and he foresaw the bitter fruits which such a policy must produce, and indeed was already producing on the fields of Virginia. He was no misanthropic cynic to exclaim, "What has posterity ever done for us that we should concern ourselves for posterity?" His care for the lands of Mr. Vernon was evidence of the God-given trait imbedded in the best of men to transmit unimpaired to future generations what has been handed down to them.

Men Girls Love.

Steady men—well, they are the princes of the matrimonial marketplace. Steadiness means stamina and dependability, and it is about the most precious streak a girl can expect to find in a man. A chap who is 100 per cent steady will streak a brighter flash across the sky of any maiden's horizon than his rival who may be a thrice wittier and exciting. Girls depend upon the steady fellows. The steady ones are bulwarks of strength and confidence. And what man doesn't secretly banker to be the sturdy oak to some sweet girl's vine—Laurel Gray in the Detroit News.

Stung But Rewarded.

Patrons of a Long Island telephone line complained of a buzzing on the wires and a trouble hunter was sent out to locate the difficulty. He located it and he did something else for he found that a swarm of bees had made a hive in the connection box on a telephone pole. The trouble hunter worked for hours and finally routed the bees with a fire extinguisher. He was badly stung, but he was rewarded by ten pounds of honey stored in the connection box.

Take City Directory's Place.

How the telephone book is displacing the directory is illustrated by complaints in Brooklyn, which has no city directory now, that it is hard to find the address of persons living there unless they have a telephone. Of course everybody of consequence ought to have telephone service now, but all of those who can't are of consequence to themselves, and many of them are of consequence to others. Marvel! Live out in the country where everybody knows you.—Boston Daily Globe.

NEWBURGH GAME IS IMPORTANT

To K. H. S. Basketball Team As It May Take Them a Bit Nearer to Syracuse Contests for State Championship.

The sectional basketball championship game "dope" as announced by A. W. Buley goes something like this:

Yonkers, the winners of the Westchester county basketball league, will play Pearl River, the winners of the Rockland county basketball league, at Tarrytown's "Y" Saturday, March 25, at 8:15 p. m. The officials of the game will be C. R. Hall of the local "Y" referee and Edward Guest of Tarrytown as umpire.

The game between the runners-up of the Central Hudson valley athletic league and Cornwall High, the winners of the Orange county league, will be held either in Kingston, Newburgh or Beacon on the same date, the place of the contest to be decided as soon as the team coming out second is determined. Arrangements are being made with Mike Paley, of Poughkeepsie, to referee the game.

The winners of each of the two games will play at a place to be determined later and the winner of that game will go to Syracuse University on April 6th, where the teams from the seven different zones will compete for the state championship. The expenses for the team journeying to Syracuse will be paid by the New York State Association of Basketball Leagues. The boys while in the city of conquest will be the guests of the various sororities at the university.

And so with the above in mind the local high school basketballers journeyed to Newburgh today to play the Academy lads for the right to compete in the sectional game. The Newburghians remain undefeated on their own court.

But hard knocks and work have characterized the practice prescribed by Coach Woodard this week. Wednesday, two practices marked the day as a strenuous one; one practice was held on the Y. M. C. A. court, and the second was held on the high school court.

The girls' varsity also made the trip to play the girls of Newburgh whom they defeated quite decisively here. Since the defeat of last Saturday the girls have been striving to cover their defects and they will enter the game with much less confidence and more fight in them.

JOHNNY DUNDEE OUTPOINTS WHITE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, March 18.—Johnny Dundee, the bounding Italian 130-pound boxing champion, today stood out as the most likely contender for Benny Leonard's lightweight crown, as a result of his victory over Charles White, the hard-hitting Chicagoan last night.

Dundee's superior speed enabled him to outpoint White and win the judges' decision at the end of the fifth round. The 130-pound title holder kept away from White's deadly left hand. Although the Chicagoan landed many hard blows with his right, he could not bring the New Yorker down and there was no question but that he was outpointed.

GOOD BASEBALL TIMBER AT K. H. S.

The baseball prospectus at the high school is again suggestive of another championship season, with the candidates for berths on the first nine being considered by Coach MacIntyre, who will be assisted by John Schrick.

In the case of "Punk" Vogt, whose presence here this season was in question because of a rumor that he was to live in New York, all is settled on that score. But the rub here: Will he be used as the first baseman or the catcher? Either position he could successfully hold down; last year, he only lost the batting average of the valley league by a small difference; as an infielder he cannot be beaten by any school boy in these parts, and his playing last season caused much wondering speculation. The catching position is left vacant now because "Buck" Sears will not be with the nine.

The absence of McAndrew leaves the second base without a custodian for it. And if a second baseman were to be picked at once, judging now from past performances, Dan Noble would be the boy for that job. As for other second base candidates not much is to be said. Colvin surely is a slugger but little is known of his prowess at stopping hot grounders. "Whitey" Schmidt, a varsity basketball man, has been talked of for this place but he has not established a precedence by any previous actions.

Out in the pasture Case and Mike Howard will surely "shoot" flies. Case is not a renowned hitter to be sure but he is a great moral aid to the team in that his teammates know that whenever a high one comes within his reach his long arms will corral it. Mike Howard is a fairly good slugger. He seldom misses a fly and he returns the ball to the infielders with astonishing accuracy and speed. Of course, there are other aspirants for the remaining vacancy among whom are Bill Gormley, Anderson, Davis, Dressel and McLane. McLane! There is the man for first base in case Vogt has to accept the mask, for he has the build, strength and racy, while he is indomitable in his gameness. Gormley possesses a "wink" that is exceedingly powerful. Anderson and Dressel are the fastest runners of any out for positions, while not much is known of Davis as a baseliner.

The short stop and the third baseman have not yet been commented upon for the very reason that the berths are already signed up for. But for the half-way mark between second and third, and staunch Miller for the third base. Both of the two have played for two consecutive seasons and at the end of each period left enviable records behind them.

The batting order sounds most logically divided in this manner: For the first man up on deck to despoil the opponents' pitcher with a "Ruthian" wallop Colvin may be suggested. Provided he does not clean up with a home run he'll at least be mid-way around the bases. Then with the battery up in the air, both Muller and Vogt should put cannon last night.

But is a crack buffer, Muller is just the person on sacrifice hits and short-snappy sprints from base to base, while Vogt is the man for whom the bleachers stand up in the lucky seventh, or when the bases are full and the score is tight.

"Rastus" Cannitz, the captain for this year's nine, is already taking a cautious survey of his ability at pegging. Undoubtedly he will be the first string pitcher for the locals and his return to the diamond in affiliation with K. H. S. will fill the devotees of high school baseball with something akin to relief. Then comes Johnny Johnston, a mite of a lad at the pitching game but with an old veteran's record upon his shoulders. It will be remembered that when last year during the Millbrook game defeat hovered over the Maroon and White forces that Johnston took the box; and with the bases full with the Millbrook men he tossed three men three strike-outs, and during the rest of the game he rallied the Colonial forces to victory, scoring the while 13 consecutive strike-outs.

But the greatest analysis that the coaches will have to make will be as to whom shall be the catcher in case Vogt is not shifted. "Speed" Scheffel, the second squad catcher last year, is not very much of a show, but at the same time he is an exceedingly light fellow. Floyd Burger and Dick Whiston have been approved as worthy contenders.

So the critics can doff their caps to the 1922 baseball nine of K. H. S. and to Manager Schantz, who has announced the following schedule of knock-out games (it will be noticed that the championship game, if the last rites are performed between K. H. S. and Poughkeepsie, will be played at Kingston):
May 2, Saugerties High at Kingston.
May 6, Kingston High at Glens Falls (pending).
May 13, Kingston High at Poughkeepsie.
May 20, Kingston High at Newburgh.
May 23, Kingston High at Saugerties.
May 30, Glens Falls High at Kingston.
June 3, Poughkeepsie at Kingston.
June 10, Newburgh at Kingston.
June 17, Open date.

If pending negotiations are realized, Roxbury High will play here April 29.

At Newburgh Coach Schwartz is all smiles as he glimpses the future of Newburgh Academy's 1922 baseball warriors. Newly ordered uniforms have arrived with all of the bats, plenty of balls and other necessary paraphernalia of the game, especially the tantalizing Foxgloes to battle the infielders with pop flies and sudden bunts.

The Newburghians are expecting a banner year, since a number of last year's veterans are back in the harness and supreme efforts will be made to cop the championship of the Central Hudson Valley, which to the locals sounds like a bit of rare and unfamiliar humor.

HOW JOE DRAKE'S BUSINESS GREW

Hard Knocks Gave Practical Experience of Unfold Value Whose Benefit He Shares With Customers.

This is an advertisement that has to do with Joseph Drake and Joseph Drake alone. Read it if it appeals to you. Do not, of course, read it if it does not strike your fancy, as I would not wish to cause you any undue loss of time. Neither do I desire to burden you with affairs that would not interest you. Now go on or stop, just as you choose.

Ten years ago on a snowy morning in March, Joseph Drake boarded a West Shore train bound for New York. The night before it was not an unusual thing for him to hear: "Well, if you stay a month before coming back, I'll miss my guess." Anyway, he left Kingston, and let him say right here that no one ever left the Old Colonial town more reluctantly and with a sadness that was all his own. He arrived not even in possession of a letter of introduction or one of recommendation to a single person of the almost countless inhabitants of the Metropolis. Landing from the ferry at West 42nd street, Joe was sure if he took a cross-town car to Fifth avenue, it would be an easy matter to find a rooming house in West 60th street. So he got on a Fifth avenue bus at 42nd street, and got out at 60th street, with no thought that Central Park begins at 59th street and that the West 60th street numbers really begin at Eighth avenue or Central Park West, which was a long way from Fifth avenue and 60th street. However, he found his destination and the next morning bright and early Joseph was standing in the sub-line in the New York World office. The World needed no extra men that day, nor did they need any for every morning for a week after. But Drake continued to show in until finally he was told to go to work. And it was then he discovered he had mess on him a foot deep. He must have shown some chance for development and although he was laid off many, many times he succeeded in not getting fired. Along in April that year the ill-fated Titanic on its maiden trip ploughed into an iceberg and sank, and for many weeks the New York papers employed everyone possible in order to publish every detail. So Drake found work on the New York Globe, where he remained a month. Being laid off, he went back to the World and was put to work for one of the regulars who did not return until a week after Labor Day. After that Joseph worked on The Press, at Munssey's and in the Federal Printing Plants at magazines. Then he put in two years in the print shop of the School of Journalism of Columbia University.

Following this, he started in the printing and engraving business for himself at 116 Nassau street, New York, getting a little business here and a little business there. Drake has developed his business until today he prints, engraves and lithographs for some mighty big concerns, as for instance, Chemical Foundation, Inc., du Pont Company, Carnegie Endowment, Shippee & Rawson, Standard Building Supply Co., Walk-Over Shoe Stores, Fischer's Restaurants, Phoenix Assurance Co., along with a great number of business houses in Kingston as well as many individuals. Last Christmas season he also got out over 15,000 engraved greeting cards, ranging in orders from 25 to 1,000, his patrons being in all walks of life.

If you have read thus far, he is pleased, and let him say in conclusion that he gets out a fine line of engraved, printed and lithographed stationery, both in the business and social lines. His prices are not the cheapest by any means, but his work, as all who buy from him know, stands in a class by itself and gives a feeling of pride to the users, as they will know that the average business is not personally introduced and its position and reason for seeking consideration must be shown by its printed and engraved stationery whose quality indicates the quality of the commercial judgment behind it. The stationery you receive exerts an potent effect on your judgment when you decide the extent of your business dealings with the person sending it to you. Don't you suppose your stationery carries the same appeal to the persons you are seeking business with?

Drake's experience in this business cost him something, but it will cost you nothing. He wants your orders and is coming to get them. He gives you the benefit of his experience.—Advertisement.
